LITHA FLOW

Rolling log drums, jazzy keys and fast Sesotho rap from a South African duo who make township life sound like a party you're already invited to.

ABOUT LITHA FLOW

Litha Flow is a South African Amapiano duo — one male voice, one female — who make township life sound like a party you're already invited to. Rolling log drums, jazzy keys and bouncing bass carry fast Sesotho rap, crowd-sized chants and the kind of back-and-forth that sounds like two friends who have never once let the other win an argument.

Their debut album, Nna Ke Sharp!, is twenty songs about getting through the week with your head up and your shoes clean. The money is gone ("Tjhelete E lle Kae?"), the password is forgotten ("Ke Lebetse Password"), the ex is calling again ("O Re'ng Jwale?") — and the answer is always the same: nna ke sharp, I'm good. Between the jokes are the love songs ("Motho Wa Ka," "Ke Ikgethela Wena") and the Friday-night anthems ("Kajeno Rea lthabisa," "Nako Ya Rona") built for the moment the whole floor sings the hook back.

Bold, funny and proudly Sesotho, Litha Flow bring the energy of the kasi to every dance floor. They are the first artists on Piano Nation, Squaredrum's home for Amapiano and Afro house, created under human creative direction with AI-assisted music.

SHORT BIO (STREAMING)

Litha Flow is a South African Amapiano duo trading fast Sesotho rap and crowd-sized hooks over rolling log drums. Their debut, Nna Ke Sharp!, turns everyday township life — broke weekends, forgotten passwords, persistent exes — into feel-good dance-floor anthems.
